

Volunteers Recognised for Making a Difference May 2007

Students and staff at the University of Lincoln were recognised for their volunteering achievements over the last year at a special celebration event. Community Volunteers and the Students' Union held the event on Thursday 10th May. Volunteers received awards of appreciation and recognition for their dedicated work in the community. Students and staff have volunteered their time to a number of activities. These include mentoring and working with young offenders, Young Enterprise Scheme, "Valued@Oxfam" project, STRUT in the Community, Drugs Intervention, Women's Aid, Age Concern, working with the homeless and many more. "Volunteering in any form shows commitment to citizenship and community cohesion, and is good CV material which prospective employers value."
